CLASSROOM AND LAB ACTIVITY

CLASSROOM AND LAB ACTIVITY

(2019-20)

Activity -1: Listening Activities

- Time frame: 10-15 minutes
- Purpose listening skills
- The students have been guided through the listening activities where there are videos that guide you through the session, such as the types of activities available, how to use listening exercises for grammar activities and a sample demo lesson. There are also handouts for guidance.
- Recommended activity: Listening Quizzes for Academic Purposes. Many of your students might need to take a TOEFL or IELTS test, and these listening activities are a great way to give more purpose to English language labs.

Activity -2: FONETIKS

Time frame: 10-15 minutes

Purpose: Speaking skills and listening skills, confidence ,self assessment

This is a website which helps students with their pronunciation. It is categorized into syllables, tone and where the stress should be on various words.

There is a page for difficult to pronounce words, as well as a place to hear pop lyrics performed.

Recommended activity: English dialogues with wh- question words. These listening activities help students practice how to ask and answer using the wh- words correctly.

Activity -3:

Time frame: 10-20 minutes

Purpose: develop listening skills, have all students participate

The focus here is on giving students tons of time to listen to native speakers having conversations in English. The study material is shared where native speakers speak in English and the students are exposed to the vocabulary, accent and pronunciation of native speakers.

Activity - 4 : CIRCLE OF VOICES

- Time frame: 15-20 minutes
- Purpose: generate ideas, develop listening skills, have all students participate, equalize learning environment

Description: This method involves students taking turns to speak. Students form circles of four or five. Give students a topic, and allow them a few minutes to organize their thoughts about it. Then the discussion begins, with each student having up to three minutes (or choose a different length) of uninterrupted time to speak. During this time, no one else is allowed to say anything. After everyone has spoken once, open the floor within the subgroup for general discussion. Specify that students should only build on what someone else has said, not on their own ideas; also, at this point, they should not introduce new ideas

Activity- 5: GROUP DISCUSSION

Developing group discussion skills is useful for everyday life as we regularly find ourselves having discussions amongst friends, family and colleagues. These may vary from very informal chats about day-to-day things, to more serious topics, for example a discussion about a recent news story or a problem that needs to be solved.

- Additionally, group discussions are increasingly being used in the job market during interviews and selection procedures. These can take a variety of formats, but the key skills remain very similar.
- Last but not least, group discussions offer an opportunity for extended speaking (and listening!) practice by all of the contributors. Group discussion practice and skill development is therefore useful for all students.

Types of discussion help students to:

- Make decisions
- Give and / or share their opinions on a given topic (e.g. discussing beliefs about the effectiveness of capital punishment)
- Create something (e.g. plan and make a poster as a medium for feedback on a language course)
- Solve a problem (e.g. discussing the situations behind a series of logic problems)

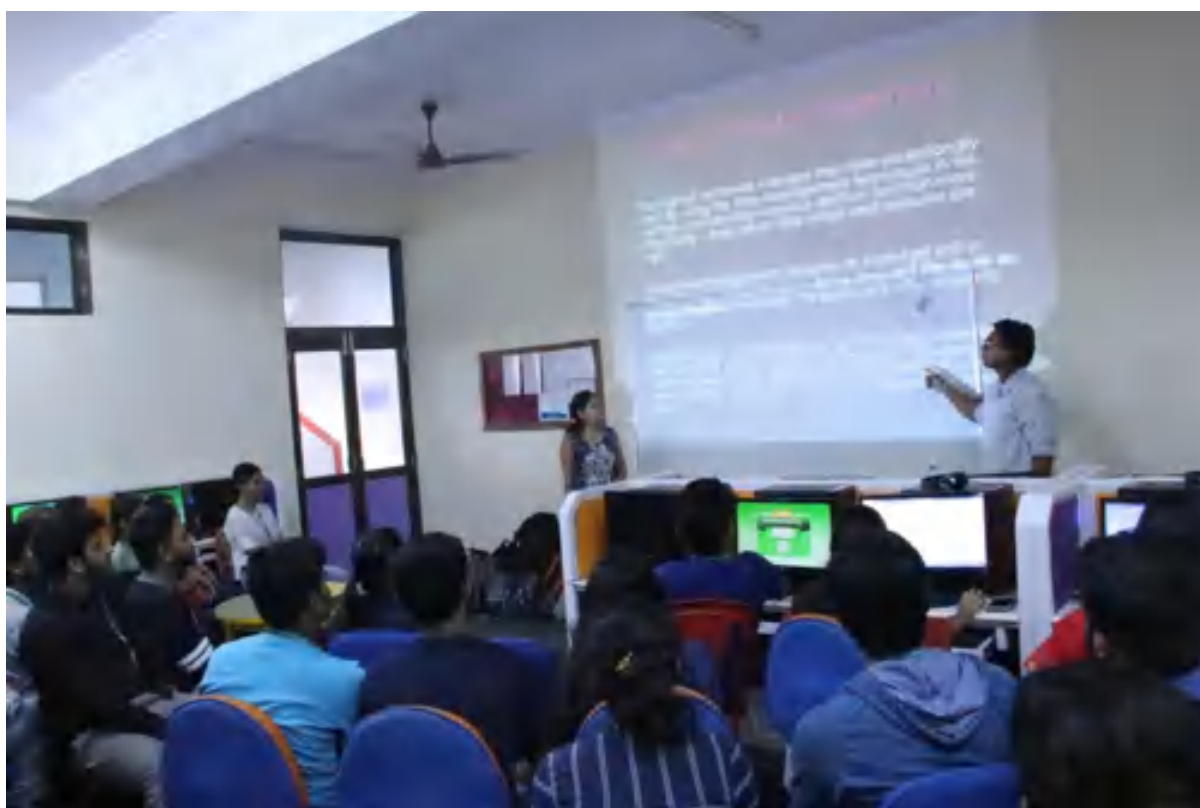

Student's discussions are conducted on latest topics/current social /economical or global problems, /current affairs/politics and education. It actively evolves students in discussion and help in building their thought process and social skills.

Activity 6: *MOCK INTERVIEW

A mock interview helps students to learn how to answer difficult questions, develop interview strategies, improve your communication skills and reduce stress before an actual job interview.

Students are given set of frequently asked questions to the trickiest one.

The technique to answer these questions is discussed in-brief in the classroom. Student practice it among themselves before appearing for the final mock interview which is generally conducted by tutor of the placement officer of the college. It helps extensively to boost confidence, learn body language, alertness and answering the questions assertively. Ultimately, it gives students hand on experience in facing campus interviews.

Report Presentation

Activity 7: PRESENTATION SKILLS

Almost all students are fearful of presentations. The fear is twofold. One is the content of the presentation and the other is the lack of presentation skills. If the content and skill are found wanting, the grade will be affected. Some may say as long as the content is well prepared, the presentation will not be a problem. It will be a pity if all your long hours of research work on the content come to nought due to last minute jittery, anxiety and you fumble during the Q and A session of the presentation.

Employers are demanding graduates with excellent communication (written, oral, and listening) skills. Thus, a student's presentation in the classroom becomes an important element in delivering positive learning experiences.
